

Nature, Labour and the Struggle for an Eco-Social World

Photo: South Africa Tourism CC BY 2.0

Is there a gap between labour and nature, or are workers and their communities engaging with nature to work towards environmental justice and a just transition? Drawing on examples from Africa, the Americas, Asia and Europe to respond to this crucial question, speakers analyse the challenges working people face when struggling for eco-social justice within a neoliberal, extractivist political economy. They shed light on conflicts between miners and communities affected by mining concerned about environmental conservation; they discuss how workers mobilize to protest against environmental crises, but also to fight regressive climate policies that put the burden of change on lower-income groups. Bringing together a wealth of experience presented in the Palgrave Handbook of Environmental Labour Studies, the series highlights how the developing field of environmental labour studies can help fuse eco-social research and practice.

Register now to save your seat and claim your discount on the Handbook!

More information and sign-up for each session is available here.

A discount code will be made available to participants during the webinar sessions.

The series is co-organized by the Center for Environmental Justice at Colorado State University, the European Trade Union Institute (ETUI), the Global Labour University (GLU), the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD), and the University of São Paulo. The ETUI is financially supported by the EU.

21
Feb.

Moving beyond extractive industries: Resistance and alternatives

16.00 CET
Hosted by Global Labour University

REGISTER

07
Mar.

Challenges and perspectives of a just transition in Europe

15.30 CET
Hosted by European Trade Union Institute

REGISTER

22
Mar.

Working-class environmentalism and just transition struggles in the Americas

16.00 CET
Hosted by United Nations Research Institute for Social Development

REGISTER

04
Apr.

Environment, labour and justice: Perspectives from the global South

18.30 CEST
Hosted by University of São Paulo

REGISTER

